

The Center for Research Libraries (CRL) has been awarded a $510,000 grant by the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation to support strategic initiatives in cataloging, the development of distributed print archives, and cooperative collection development. The initiatives will enhance the CRL's ability to catalyze cooperative resource building and preservation among its membership of North American research libraries.

Source: C&RL News, July/August 2002, pp.520.